

RE 220: Religion and Film

Course explores the notion of cinema as a type of technology that has served a variety of thought-provoking roles in American history and culture, such as a medium for defining “good” and “evil,” as an audio-visual technology for shaping American politics, and as an inventor of new religious trajectories. WI

Hours: 3

Program: Religion

Semester Offered:

Fall even years