

PS 350: Politics in the Third World

An examination of the structure and process of Third World politics and governments with emphasis on the international political economy. Themes include the nature of capitalist and socialist perspectives of development and underdevelopment. This course will count as a sociology major elective.

Hours: 3

Program: Political Science

Semester Offered:

Spring odd